The Daily Courant.

Numb. 3649

Wednesday, June 24. 1713.

London, June 24.
Yesterday arrived the Mail from Holland of Friday last.

From the Amsterdam Gazette, dated June 30.

THE French are still employed in battering the Fort over-against this Town, with 8 Cannon and 2 Mortars. They thought at first to have carried it at a Push, with 4000 Men, and a great Number of Fascines which they had provided for passing the Morasses; but our Men having Intelligence of it by two Deserters, gave them so good a Reception, that they were obliged to retire with the Loss of 300 wounded, besides the Killed; they have sent their Wounded to Spire. They now make their Approaches in form, and wait for more heavy Artillery. But 'tis hoped that if the Rhine and Neckar continue to swell, they will be forced to draw off. The overflowing of the Waters has already obliged them to change their Batteries. We have here in Garrison the Regiments of Iselbach, Saxe-Meiningen, Freidenberg, and Sultzbach, Infantry; the Regiments of Wiengenstein, Vehlen, and Hazfeld, Horse, and the Regiment of Dragoons of Hahn.

From the Leiden Gazette, dated June 30.

From the Imperial Camp near Philipsbourg, June 25. Some Days ago Prince Eugene went from his Quarters at Muhlberg to Oberhausen to see General Count Kels; his Highness came afterwards to view the Fortifications of Philipsbourg, and those of the Fort situate on the other Side of the Rhine over-against that City; he was likewise to view the Fort of Mannheim, and divers other neighbouring Posts. The Enemy have been obliged to change their Attack against the Fort of Mannheim, by the great Fire made on them from the Cannon of that Fort and of the Town of Mannheim; but they began Yesterday Morning early to batter the said Fort with great Fury, with 7 Demy Culverins, and some of the Bullets flew into the Town of Mannheim, where several Persons were wounded and some Houses damaged. 'Tis said they are now working upon a Battery of Mortars, to bombard both the Town and Fort.

From the Amsterdam Courant, dated July 1.

From the Army near Philipsbourg, June 24. The Enemy carry on their Attack of the Fort of Mannheim so vigorously, that 'tis thought they will storm it to Night, and perhaps carry it, tho' the Garrison which consists of but 100 Men under a Lieutenant-Colonel and a Major, defend themselves very bravely, also great Mischiefs is done the Enemy by the Artillery of the Citadel of Mannheim.

From the Amsterdam Gazette, dated June 30.

Frankfurt, June 25. The Troops of Hesse-Cassel are arrived near this City, and to Morrow they will continue their March to join the Army. The Troops of Hanover are likewise arrived in this Neighbourhood: They will pass the Main at Coftheim, and will encamp at Gustavusbrug till they receive Orders from Prince Eugene.

From the Leiden Gazette, dated June 30.

There are Letters from Francfort which advise, that the Duke of Marlborough was gone from thence to use the Waters of Slangenbach, where are the Elector of Mentz and the Landgrave of Hesse-Cassel: That the Town of Keyserlautern had surrendered to the Generals Quad and Dillon, but that the Garrison having retired into the Castle defended themselves there; that 'twas reckoned the Fort of Mannheim might hold out to the 27th; and that the Garrison of the Town of Mannheim had secured the flying Bridge.

From the Amsterdam Courant, dated July 1.

Mentz, June 24. A strong Party of Horse and Muffars which marched out of this Place to Day, met and defeated near Oppenheim one of the Enemy's Parties of 225 Men, killing several of them, and bringing in 40 Prisoners with 80 Horses. Some Vessels laden with Corn for our Army, cannot proceed higher up because of the Enemy's Forts and Redoubts along the Rhine, so that if it be judged necessary they will be unladen, and the Corn sent forward by Land. Our Fortifications will be perfected in about 8 Days.

From the Paris Letter, dated June 26.

Paris, June 26. Letters from Madrid of the 12th bring no other News, than that the King had dismissed the Cortes or States of the Kingdom, and that there was Advice from Catalonia that General Staremberg had sent to to Admiral Jennings to desire him to come to Barcelona, in Order to regulate together the speediest they could the Imbarkation of the German Troops. We learn by Letters from the Camp of Landau of the 19th, that the Troops which the Marshal de Villars had posted along the Rhine, had intercepted and taken a Convoy of 2000 Sacks of Corn which the Enemy would have put into Landau before it was intirely invested, and that the Garrison having made a Sally to favour the bringing in of that Convoy was vigorously repulled and the Guards defeated. The Mines under Fort Kehl were finished, and the Workmen which were employed in making them were gone to joyn those who are working at the Mines of old Brisac, which will likewise soon be finished. We have since received Advice by an Express from the Marshal de Villars, that the Trenches were opened against Landau the Night between the 21st and 22d; and that M. Dillon had possessed himself of the Town and Castle of Keyserlautern on the Frontier of the Palatinate.

Moun for
